Introductory Note to Teachers

This manual supplies answers to the various exercises contained in the Student Edition. In many lessons, the student is asked to write sentences using his or her own words or to provide examples of the grammatical subject discussed in the lesson. Sentences and other answers supplied for these lessons will vary from student to student and may not coincide with the answers given in this key. The answers given in this manual are for illustrative purposes and for theoretical comparison with the student's answers and sentences.

In other lessons, objective answers are required. The student's answers should match or closely match the answers given in this key.

In most cases, the teacher should use discretion in checking student answers with those given in this key, with the primary objective being to ascertain whether the student fully understands the concepts taught in the lesson. The key also includes various specific notes to teachers dealing with certain individual answers which may need clarification or extra measures of discretion.
